

JOB DESCRIPTION

Procurement Manager

Ref. J084/WW/DC/C0108/2019

- Top 5 aircraft MRO.
- Winning with repair partners.
- Business and engineering in harmony.

Our client is a large European maintenance repair organisation, with a broad product portfolio of services. They have a significant presence in Asia and they are now looking for a Procurement Manager based in Hong Kong.

This role is part of Aircraft Components Repair Services, and you will bring onboard and manage repair partners who can deliver to the cost profiles, service and standards of our client.

You are familiar with qualifying repair providers, and subsequent supplier and performance management of these key partners.

The industry can only move forward and improve, and you will regularly review areas for improvement and execute changes. You will know about the latest innovations and airline needs in the repair world and will bring these to bear to keep our client in front. These can be alternative repairs, process changes or component modifications, whatever it takes to be the best.

You will relish working across the business with your own engineers, other business units and repair facilities and turning customer requirements into great working solutions.

This is the leading edge of aviation maintenance, so you will be already working in aviation or aerospace. You will have a solid reputation in engineering procurement and have a business head. You enjoy making relationships and turning them into positive actions with your repair partners and when there are none, you can create opportunities with new ones. You are comfortable working independently and also be part of a global team, in one moment a team member, and the next a team leader. This is business, negotiating, thinking on your feet, people front and centre, aircraft engineering and ultimately, delivering consistently. Be fluent in English and Chinese and if you can speak another European language that would be advantageous.
