Managing Director

- Global Logistics Specialist.
- Asian operation.
- You know ground handling back to front.

Our client is a global logistic specialist serving the airline industry. They have presence at airports across the world.

They are now seeking a Managing Director to head up their operation at a strategic Asian hub.

Delivering a great service in a demanding airport is the game. You will do this with financial prowess whilst you and your team live by the client's brand promise.

The operation is a joint venture and you will be versed in working with the various stake holders. You will know ground handling operations back to front, knowing to make the operation slick whilst upholding the highest levels of safety and quality.

As a business, you will drive financial & operational performance, supported by KPIs to surgically target areas of change and improvement. The social impact is part of the brand promise which will be interwoven into your strategies and plans. Being an airport service provider, your reach will be extended beyond the customers, but with regulatory & governmental bodies and business partners.

You will be a proven leader, great with people and role model for your team. You must have come from a ground handling background and be able to hit the running as soon you start. You are the heart of the team, and capable of turning strategy into action, executing well with the them.

Your business head is as sharp as your operational one and working with the highest levels in the aviation and business community is what gives you a buzz.

An airport isn't an airport without the unexpected, and you can lead your team to deliver whatever is coming around the corner.
